Party goes out with a bang

Committee fired up about next year's bash

By Scott Kelly
Staff writer

No doubt about it, Granite City knows how to party. The second annual Patriots in the Park, held in Wilson Park, was a rousing success, and planning is already underway for the next Independence Day bash.

"It was fantastic," said Dave Polivik, director of parks and recreation.

Rain threatened on Friday, but the brunt of the storm missed Granite City, instead hitting and closing down Fair Saint Louis.

The biggest attraction for this year's July 4 party was the computer-synchronized, musical fireworks.

"(They) were a big hit. They were the best Granite City has ever had," Polivik said.

Fireworks were timed to go off to certain beats or lyrics in the music. For instance, during a Ray Charles piece, when the word "red" was Their license plates showed that they had come from all over. Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma. Even Ontario, Canada.

Some were from the 1950s, some from the 1960s and still others were from the 1970s and 80s.

Blue, black, white, red, silver and even green were just a few of their colors. But for all their differences, the more than 100 cars assembled at Collinsville's Gateway Center this week had one thing in common: the Corvette emblem.

The cars are on display through today during competition in the National Corvette Restorers Society's convention. The group is celebrating its 25th year.

The Corvette, first manufactured in 1953, is nearly twice that old. Cletus Beck of Collinsville remembers those early years. He spent some of this week at Gateway admiring the various cars and reminiscing with some of his former co-workers.

Car-jacking ends in area

Driver OK; suspect still sought

By Scott Cousins

Police are still searching for an alleged car-jacker who eluded a man-hunt near Granite City Tuesday.

The suspect allegedly forced a man at gunpoint to drive him from Ballwin, Mo., to Illinois.

The suspect was described as a white male, mid-30s, with dark colored "clean cut" hair, clean-shaven with a medium build.

He was reportedly wearing a white pocket T-shirt and blue jeans, and was last seen near Old Alton Road and Oldenberg Road north of Granite City.

According to the Madison County Sheriff's Department, at about 10:10 a.m. police received a 911 call from the victim, who was at a service station near West Chain of Rocks Road.

Area ready for 'normal' seasonal heat

By Scott Cousins

Tri-City area residents have been coping with recent high temperatures fairly well, but the next few days may be a problem.

Kathleen Gauen, emergency room director at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, said Wednesday morning that the hospital is getting ready to deal with heat-related emergencies.

"So far so good," she said. "I think the next couple of days will be telling."

The National Weather Service issued a heat advisory for Wednesday, and the American Lung Association issued a warning of unhealthy air quality.

CAROL'S COMMENTS

Telling book in investigation will be written by Lewinsky

In Kenneth Starr's apparently interminable investigation of Whitewater, no detail is too minute to escape scrutiny. Or so it would seem to a lot of us. Case in point was last week's announcement that Monica Lewinsky's attorneys have agreed to provide Starr with records of her book purchases.

Carol Clarkin

Until I read the news story, I'd been unaware that Starr was interested in Lewinsky's reading tastes, but as far back as March, he was seeking information about her purchases from two Washington bookstores, Kramerbooks and the Georgetown outlet of Barnes & Noble, both of whom were stonewalling his subpoenas with court challenges. For whatever reason, he apparently failed to simply ask Monica if she'd read any good books lately.

Both bookstores viewed his demands as a violation of First Amendment rights. The Special Prosecutor's interest in the lady's literary preferences was limited to some 16-odd purchases, chief among which was "Vox," described as a phone-sex novel which her fair weather friend Linda Tripp reportedly claimed Lewinsky had said she bought as a gift for Bill Clinton. Starr was supposedly seeking to corroborate Tripp's statement, an allegation which, if true, undoubtedly couldn't be substantiated by scanning the books shelves in the Oval Office.

I'm in no position to comment on "Vox." Never heard of the book until I read the news story, don't even know if it exists, but I'm thinking about a couple of things, one being what Starr might deduce if he scanned my own bookcases.

Are Edmund Wilson's "Memoirs of Hecate County" or Mary McCarthy's "The Company She Keeps" still considered mildly salacious? How about DeFoe's "Moll Flanders"? Is James Baldwin OK? By my own standards, I don't own a single book I'd consider pornographic, but who's to say what Kenneth Starr might judge as being lewd?

Then there's the question of books as gifts. I buy a number of books in any given year and living in an apartment, have limited space for shelves and bookcases, so I frequently give some of them away.

To a couple of local friends who share some of my reading tastes. To my cousins Bob Drake and Chuck Gray.

Additionally, a lot of people give me books. My kids and grandkids. A dear friend who has an extremely good handle on what I enjoy reading. What I find amusing or interesting. As a gift, give me a good book over candy or flowers any old day.

If Linda Tripp is being truthful in her accounts of conversations with Lewinsky, there's yet another future possibility. Monica could, eventually, write a book about the liaison. She wouldn't be the first to do so.

Until I was in my mid-thirties, I'd heard of (but never read) a book, "The President's Daughter," by one Nan Britton. A name that is probably unfamiliar to many but a young Ohio woman who claimed not only to having had an affair with Warren G. Harding but also to having given birth to a child resulting from the affair.

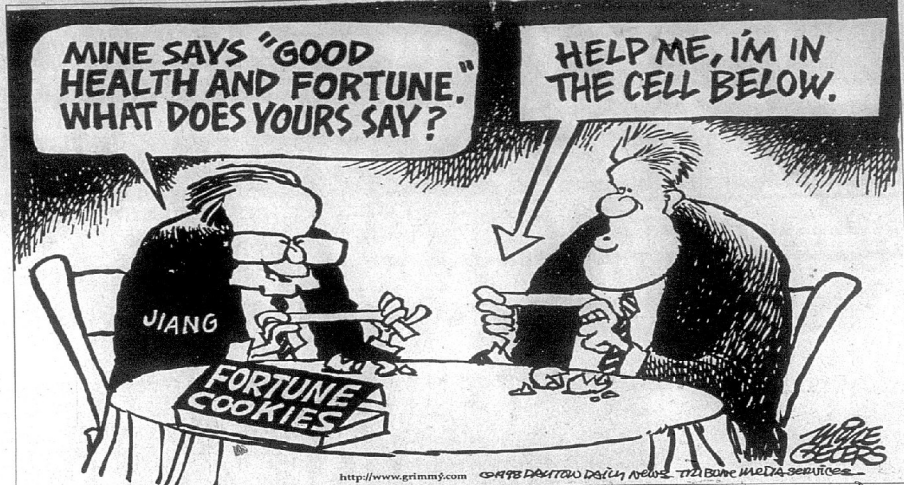

During the late 1950s, the Alton Telegraph's Edwardsville news bureau was officed on the second floor of the old Madison Store on Purcell St. and our next-door-neighbor was the late Dallas Harrell.

Dallas and his wife, Irene, were inveterate readers with an extensive home library, from which he often loaned me books. "The President's Daughter" was one of them and even then was something of a collector's item.

Great literature it wasn't, neither was it pornographic, though it dealt with such matters as sexual hanky-panky in the Capitol cloakroom, New York hotels (guarded by Secret Service personnel), etc.

Very, very badly written, but a best-seller in its day. I'd bet the farm that Monica, should she ever be so inclined, could read today's best-seller list for months, pay off her lawyers, and buy a little villa in Nice.

The only question would be the listing. Fiction or non-fiction?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Tax is unfair

TO THE EDITOR:

We are hog farmers from Hancock and Christian counties and have always felt that the mandatory pork checkoff is wrong. The pork checkoff is a mandatory tax on all hog farmers that amounts to approximately 45 cents for every $100 worth of pork they market.

It's wrong because it is not democratic. I'm sure the National Pork Producers Council, the recipient of checkoff funds, and some hog farmers can identify several programs funded by checkoff dollars that have helped farmers. We can identify programs that do not help farmers. Regardless, the program should be voluntary so that those farmers who do not believe the program works for them can use their hard-earned money for other purposes.

NPPC has already claimed that if the program becomes voluntary, few farmers will pay into the system, and therefore, no one organization will exist to promote pork.

However, NPPC should not worry about the potential impacts of a voluntary system. If NPPC conducts themselves and their programs in an accountable manner and actually uses funds to help farmers, we are convinced that farmers will pay into the system. Unfortunately, because the program is mandatory, NPPC does not have to prove they are helping anyone.

In an attempt to defend the mandatory tax, NPPC claims that the program is working. However, ever since the program became mandatory in 1986, the following trends have developed:

- Producers paid $417 million into the checkoff program; however, per capita consumption of pork increased only 0.4 pounds.

The price of pork at the grocery store has risen 30 percent while the farmer's share has dropped 10 percent; and • Prices paid to farmers have fallen from 49 cents a pound to around 35 cents a pound and more than 207,000 hog farmers have quit the business during that time.

Prices and markets are what matter most to hog farmers. Unfortunately, we are getting neither; the trends will only worsen in the years to come if the checkoff-fueled expansion by the corporate producers continues.

This is why the Campaign for Family Farms has launched a petition drive to hold a referendum on the mandatory pork checkoff. The eight-member coalition representing eight states and its allies including Farm Aid, the National Catholic Rural Life Conference and the National Family Farm Coalition intend to circulate petitions nationwide. Once 15 percent of all hog farmers that checked off in the last year sign the petition, a referendum will be held. A majority of hog farmers who checked off must vote against the mandatory checkoff to recall the program.

We encourage all hog farmers who are tired of paying into a system without a choice to get a copy of the petition and sign it, and get your neighbors who raise hogs to sign it as well. You can get a copy of the petition by contacting the Campaign for Family Farms at (217) 498-9707, or P.O. Box 3016, De Mot, Ill. 60429.

The time is now to stand for the democracy and our right to choose to support the Pork Council or not.

Closing heartache should last

TO THE EDITOR:

On April 22, 1998, after much public discussion about how the issue was tearing at their hearts, 15 members of the Madison County Board voted to close the County Nursing Home and Sheltered Care Home. They said their hearts told them the homes must close, yet the decision troubled them.

This makes me wonder what their hearts are saying now.

Mr. Board member: When you gather with friends, if the topic of closing the home comes up, do you always tell them how you voted?

When you see someone you know has a relative in one of the homes do you ask how they are doing?

If you see someone who has moved their loved one to a different home, do you ask if they are satisfied with the new place?

When you see someone whose mother or daughter or husband is losing their job because of your vote, do you ask how the family is?

Has your heart told you lately that Madison County will be a better place to work and raise a family as soon as these two homes are closed?

Mr. Board member, have you been to the unions yet to ask for campaign contributions and votes in the next election? When you go will your heart want you to tell them that you voted to close the homes, eliminating 130 union jobs without a single negotiating meeting?

Have you wondered if you might have done better for the people of the county by looking at options other than simply closing the homes as quickly as possible?

Do you ever wonder about the last day? When you are called to answer for all of the choices you have made in your life, will you feel that your choice on this matter was the best you could do? What will your heart say then?

Please consider the words of King Benjamin: "I have labored with mine own hands that I might serve you, and that ye shall not be laden with taxes. Yet my brethren, I have not done these things that I might boast, neither do I tell you these things that I might accuse you, but I tell you these things that I might answer a clear conscience before God, this day." I tell you these things that ye may learn wisdom; that ye may learn that when ye are in the service of your fellow beings, ye are only in the service of your God.

Gentlemen, has your heart told you lately that you are in service to your God? If not, you may have heart trouble for a long, long time.

If course, there is no need to listen to anything I might say. Just listen to your heart.

Those on "Indy" should be honored

TO THE EDITOR:

The story in the Granite City Press-Record about the sinking of the Navy ship USS Indianapolis, a heavy cruiser that was sunk by a Japanese submarine in the Pacific Theatre of World War II, was timely and nostalgic. The demise of this great Navy Ship took down more than 800 American sailors, two from the Granite City area, Morgan Guenther and Joe Consiglio.

Unified courts offer personal touch

Imagine one family, one court and one judge who has the entire picture of that family's problems. It happens in some places, where they have unified family courts.

But, the following story is much more common: Mary, a mother of three, finally summons the strength to leave her abusive husband, Jim. She flees with her children to a domestic violence shelter, where the staff encourages her to take out a protective order against her husband. Meanwhile, he files for temporary custody of the children and has her arrested for kidnapping. What does Mary do? Mary goes to court. Or rather, Mary goes to many courts.

She goes before one judge to get the protection order, another to defend the kidnapping charge, and yet another to fight the custody order. If she were to obtain custody of the children and to file for divorce, that probably means she goes before yet another judge. Do all the judges know what is going on with this case in other courtrooms? Not necessarily. In some jurisdictions, not likely. Just when Mary needs the support of the justice system, bureaucracy gets in the way.

Unified family courts, in contrast, nor-

"Unified family courts are based on the premise that a family's social and legal needs are best served when one judge and social services team is assigned the case."

mally require a single court team to track and to decide all the family's legal problems, including custody, divorce, juvenile delinquency, child support and criminal charges arising from domestic violence.

Judges are trained not only in the law, but also in the delivery of social services and, in most cases, dispute resolution. Unified family courts are based on the premise that a family's social and legal needs are best served when one judge and social services team is assigned the case. The team stays with the family until the issues are resolved and sometimes beyond.

Unified family courts ensure that domestic problems are comprehensively addressed and help ward off potential domestic crises in the future. The courts employ social and mental health counseling and alternative dispute resolution mechanisms, to address problems within families that may manifest themselves in aberrant behavior. Non-legal issues and legal issues that don't require a judge can be separated out by experts, so that they don't take up precious court time.

Twelve states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico have unified family courts of some kind, and some localities in a few other states use such a system. But that's not enough. All citizens of all our states should have access to this type of system.

At a time when daily headlines of family dysfunction, domestic violence and juvenile crime jump out at us, we need another approach.

Mary and the thousands like her should receive appropriate, efficient resolution from the justice system, including the services they need to ensure the family's health and safety. Unified family courts can provide that.

Ryan visits area today

Gubernatorial candidate will hear council's concerns

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

Republican gubernatorial candidate Illinois Secretary of State George Ryan will meet with officials from the Leadership Council Southwestern Illinois and take a tour of the area today.

Jim Pennekamp, executive director of the Leadership Council, said the idea is to familiarize the candidates with the needs of southwestern Illinois.

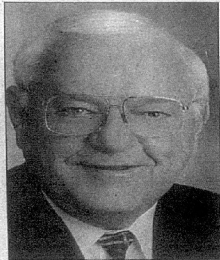

Democratic candidate U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard recently took a similar tour.

"There are three major issues on the Leadership Council agenda," Pennekamp said.

Those issues include:

- Transportation, particularly the need for a new Mississippi River bridge.

The council has said the bridge, to be located about 1 mile south of the McKinley Bridge, is the region's top priority. Both federal and state money has been earmarked for continuing studies and engineering work, but no funds have been set aside for construction, which will cost upwards of $500 million.

George Ryan

Indiana, Michigan and Missouri — those states all have very similar programs. We think there needs to be a meaningful discussion about those kinds of issues."

As part of the tour, Ryan will view Madison and St. Clair County airport facilities, interstate growth corridors, military installations and approaches for the proposed bridge.

"The fact that they have both responded to our invitation are very positive. Discussions with Poshard were very good, and we believe Ryan will be equally receptive."

Jim Pennekamp

- Military affairs such as base closings.

- Discussion of development incentives.

Pennekamp said development incentives would "level the playing field" with other states in attracting development.

"Both Ryan and Poshard have talked about their economic development agendas, and we want to talk about how that will affect Southwestern Illinois," Pennekamp said.

Another important issue is income tax credits for new or expanded businesses.

"If the jobs weren't in the state, the revenues wouldn't be there, so most state's new these as revenue neutral," he said. "The situation right now is Kentucky,

Ryan also will be briefed by the Leadership Council's Executive Committee on southwestern Illinois issues.

After his tour, Poshard emphasized economic development while talking to reporters.

As part of that, he said cleaning up brownfields — lightly contaminated or abandoned industrial sites — was a priority for the Metro East and the state.

"Our agenda is very clear," Pennekamp said. "One of these gentlemen is going to be the next governor of Illinois."

"The fact that they have both responded to our invitation are very positive," he said. "Discussions with Poshard were very good, and we believe Ryan will be equally receptive."

Poll judges eye technology

Madison County seeks to punch out old tabulation method

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

County election judges attending training this week got a sneak peek at the future.

In addition to normal training, Madison County Clerk Mark Von Nida gave judges a chance to look over an optical scanning voting system.

What we are doing is familiarizing with old processes as well as acquainting them with some of the new things that we expect to see over the next two years," he said.

With the optical system, voters use a pen or pencil to fill in a circle, similar to filling in answers on a standardized test. The ballot is then fed into a bin.

"The real advantage to this is that it incorporates newer technology," he said. "It can actually read the ballots and tabulate the results all day long. The results cannot be accessed until the end of the night, but the neat thing is that after the final ballots have been voted, the results can be tabulated in a matter of minutes."

It also allows for telephone hook up and transmission to the County Clerk's office.

Since 1978, Madison County voters have used a punch-card system.

"The punch card — in 1978 when we adopted it — was the standard and it was in use in over half the election counties, now it's in use in less than 20 percent," Von Nida said.

He also said the punch-card system is becoming expensive to maintain, and it is difficult to get parts for counting machines.

Von Nida said he also thinks the new method is easier for voters.

"It brings back paper and pen to make a decision," he said.

In the last election, he said 160 people voted blank ballots.

Part of the problem is that people are used to writing and filling in, and changing that is difficult for some people.

"We're suddenly supposed to throw all of that out when we go to the voting booth, and all of a sudden we're going to use a little pen and poke holes in a card," he said. "It was a good system back in 1978. It was quicker and had many advantages over the old lever voting machines."

However, in addition to the added expenses, he said there are "significant" problems with accuracy in the punch-

SHIRLEY VALENCIA / For the Press-Record
At top, Von Nida, Elizabeth Ebrecht, Vincine Zorlan and Maxine Ellington. Above, Lisa Pacheco tests the new system.

card system, but added it doesn't affect races "unless they are very tight."

Another factor is that voters can check their ballots before handing them in to make sure they voted the way they intended. With the punch-card system voters could not tell.

Every time I've ever finished voting with a punch-card, I take a look at that card and have a sick feeling in my stomach," Von Nida said. "It's kind of difficult to tell if the ballots are correct). With the optical system you can check your work before you turn it in."

He also said the optical system is now being used in more jurisdictions than the punch-card system.

"I've come to the conclusion that it's not a matter of if either jurisdictions are going to adopt this as standard technology, I think it's a matter of when," he said.

For Madison County, when could be as soon as the November elections.

He said the County Board will consider purchasing a system next year, but they may consider a lease arrangement sooner.

"If I can gather significant support from county board ahead of time, we can work out a lease arrangement," he said.

The cost of putting the system in would be between $600,000 and $1 million.

A series of public meetings sponsored by the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council will focus on a regional transportation project proposal for the next three years.

The proposal — known as the Transportation Improvement Program — will divide $1.07 billion in federal expenditures on almost 700 different transportation, transit, highway and bridge projects in the eight-county St. Louis region for the fiscal years 1999 through 2001. With the addition of local matching funds, the total cost of the projects will exceed $1.5 billion.

Through the series of meetings, the public has a chance to look over — and possibly change — the plan.

"We're actually seeking the input of the public," said John Smith, transportation planner for the council. "We would really like to see large turnouts as far as the public is concerned. We have made revisions based on information gathered by the public."

The cost of projects in the program can range from less than $100,000 to several $100 million, Smith said.

Present TIP projects include the extension of Metrolink into St. Clair County, continuing construction of the Alton Bypass and the proposed new Mississippi River bridge.

Eight hearings will be held in Missouri and Illinois. The council is expected to adopt the TIP at its Aug. 26 meeting.

Adoption of the TIP for major transportation-related projects in the region is required before federal funds can be spent on them. Depending on the type of project, federal funds can total up to 90 percent of the project cost.

Summaries of the TIP are available on the EWGCC web site — www.ewgccc.org — and copies of the full TIP will be available at the meetings.

Council, local government representatives and Illinois

Department of Transportation representatives will be available to answer questions.

In Illinois, the meetings will be from 4 to 7 p.m. in Madison County, the meeting will be Wednesday, July 15 in the IDOT District office regional conference room, 1100 Eastport Plaza, Collinsville. In St. Clair County, the meeting will be Thursday, July 16, in room 1410 of Belleville Area College, 2500 Carlyle Road.

Written comments can be submitted to the council until Aug. 14. Written comments should be addressed to Les Sterman, executive director, East-West Gateway Coordinating Council, 10 Stadium Plaza, St. Louis, 63102.

Power prices will drain IP's earnings

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

Things worked out relatively well for Illinois Power customers during the recent heat wave. IP shareholders might not be so lucky. After experiencing unprecedented—and unexpected—prices for power during the last week of June, IP said Monday the costs will mean 1998 earnings will be next to nothing.

"The high prices we paid for power recently will not be passed on to our customers," said Larry Altenbaumer, chief financial officer for IP. "The result will be a significant disappointment to our shareholders. But expectations for 1999 and beyond are very bright."

Altenbaumer, in a conference call with media from around the state, said extra costs for the entire year figure to run at approximately $130 million. IP saw purchase prices soar to anywhere from $4 to $6 per kilowatt-hour, a unit of energy that sells to retail customers for no more than 10 cents.

"If we had passed the cost on to our customers, they would have had an average monthly bill of about $5,000," Altenbaumer said. "We're the victims of the market as it exists now. But a large part of our mission is to serve our customers, and we did that as best we could."

Altenbaumer said IP had a cost overrun of $15 million for the first five months of the year. For June alone, he said it was $40 million. IP is estimating another $58 million for the rest of the summer and $17 million for the last four months of the year.

Altenbaumer said numbers are figured before taxes. He also said IP expects to break even for the year, resulting in earnings of "zero cents per share in earnings."

On June 30, IP petitioned the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for an emergency rule limiting the cost of emergency power.

Louis where the classic cars were once manufactured.

He was a master electrician at the plant for 32 years, starting in 1964 and retiring in 1996, five years after Corvette production was moved to Bowling Green, Ky. Beck's son-in-law is an employee at that plant.

Beck never owned a Corvette. In fact, he was initially a little skeptical about the car. "I didn't like that fiberglass," he said. "But it was some car."

It never occurred to workers in those early years that they were building an enduring icon of American culture.

"We sure never thought that," Beck said.

But the cars are appreciated by people from all over the country, many of whom lovingly restore them.

Pete Hartman of Long Island, N.Y., carefully polishes the chrome on his 1957 convertible. The shine in the silver reflects the car's finish.

"It was unusual for its time," Hartman said of his car's Aztec copper color. "Everybody wanted the black, red. Now it's like the colors people want."

Hartman brought his car in by trailer. He has had it for four years and carefully restored it. He bought it from a friend who had planned to restore it as a father/son project. When that fell through, Hartman bought the car.

It was in boxes and food canisters, just so many pieces," Hartman said. "It truly was a model in every sense of the word."

Whether in their original condition or carefully restored, some of the cars seemed too perfect to drive. But that, said some of the owners, is part of the fun. Jim Elder drove his 1972 in from Tulsa, Okla. He has owned the car for 11 years.

"I take it anywhere I go," Elder said. "It goes daily."

Owning a Corvette fulfilled a lifelong dream for Elder. It may also explain the fascination with the car for nearly five decades.

"When you're a kid, you always want one," Elder said. "It was the fastest car around."

Attorney at Law

People who are building a home need to understand the importance of lien waivers so that they do not end up paying more than the original contract price. Illinois law provides that anyone who performs work or supplies materials for work on a residence has a lien against the land itself. This encumbrance upon the property is known as a mechanic's lien, and it applies not only to the person who contracts directly with the owner of the land but also to any subcontractors who are employed by the general contractor.

The owner of the property must be careful in paying out sums due to the general contractor since the general contractor may not in turn pay the subcontractors. If the owner of the property makes payments to the general contractor who in turn fails to pay subcontractors, the owner can end up paying the subcontractors for work he thought he was paying the general contractor for, and actually pay more than the original contract price. The way to avoid this problem is to insist upon lien waivers signed by a general contractor and all subcontractors before any payments are made.

Recently, the owners of some land contracted with a general contractor to build them a home.

The general contractor in turn employed a carpenter in the construction of the home at an hourly rate of $11.49. When the work was completed, the general contractor had failed to pay the carpenter all of the monies that were owed. The carpenter filed a notice and claim for mechanic's lien against the owner's property for more than $1,500 due him in wages. It should be noted that the owner had not bothered to insist on lien waivers in this case.

The owners argued that the carpenter was in fact an employee of the general contractor and therefore was not entitled to enforce a lien under the Mechanic's Lien Act because he was not a subcontractor. The Appellate Court noted that the Act identifies the subcontractor as a workman or other person performing services or labor for the contractor. The Court stated that it could find no basis to exclude the carpenter from coverage under the Mechanic's Lien Act and therefore the owners of the property faced the potential of having to pay his wages in that they failed to obtain lien waivers before they paid the general contractor.

12-year-old group has inventors from all over the area

By Rebecca Hopkins
Correspondent

If you have an invention, or just a great idea then perhaps you should check out the Illinois Inventors and Innovators Society.

The group has been in existence since the summer of 1986 and holds monthly meetings at the Madison Mutual Insurance building on Illinois 157 in Edwardsville the second Wednesday of every month.

Phil Curry, spokesperson for the group, is a charter member of the organization and said they now have approximately 30 members.

"Usually 10 to 15 show up at the meetings," Curry said. "We have members from Carbondale, Effingham, St. Louis and the greater metro area."

Curry, an Edwardsville resident since 1996, is a retired vice president of Center Bank in St. Louis and currently operates his own business, S and C Service Co. Inc., in Glen Carbon.

He is a 25-year member and a past president of the Edwardsville Lions Club. In 1987 he received the Melvin Jones Award, the Lion's highest honor named for the founder of Lions International.

Curry said people should not respond to late-night television ads or promotional people from inventors' services.

"You need to remember that they are in business to make money and there is no guarantee you will get anything for your money," Curry said. "Some companies will even offer to file a patent for you at a cost, but you can pick up a form for a provisional patent and complete it yourself and file for $75 until you can file the final patent."

"Your best bet, though, is to get a patent attorney who can write the appropriate language to protect the patent itself. I'm not a patent attorney or expert on anything...these are my personal feelings from experience."

Curry said many people are unaware of the basics of research, production and marketing, and assume that they can take an idea to a company and they will do all the work necessary to market a new idea.

"The production process is very expensive," Curry said. "Let's say you invented some new kind of plastic ashtray that you want to sell for 5 cents."

"What you must figure into the cost is the price of injection molding, which can cost thousands of dollars, and marketing to the proper companies that you want to sell your product. It can be very difficult to get retailers to give you any shelf space with an unproven product."

Two group members are patented inventors, but neither has become rich off his invention.

Terry Fagan of Edwardsville is a carpenter who works out of Local 633 in Granite City. He patented a tool for hanging suspended ceilings that could be used from the floor rather than climbing the scaffolding. He had 100 of them made by a machinist and assembled them himself, but finding someone to do the marketing was the tough part.

"We ran a little test and found that workmen could hang 250 per man per day with the scaffolding, but using my tool they could hang 600 each," Fagan said. "I sold about 70 of them for $200 each, but it was too much trying to sell and still work full time."

Another member who had some success with his invention is Bob Biby from Troy. Biby is a retired Illinois State Trooper who specialized in surveillance operations. He found a need for a quiet air-cooler when he could not leave his vehicle running.

"Basically what I made is a battery-powered air cooler," Biby said. "I used a 178-quart Rubbermaid ice chest and built a heat exchanger inside it from plastic piping and hooked that up to a battery so it can run off the cigarette lighter. All you do is fill it full of ice and plug it in."

Biby used his prototype to take to vendor fairs around the country and sold 300 for $16.95 each.

Curry said that those who succeed with an invention will do so in an area that he or she knows something about.

He said that he doesn't mean to offend anyone, but some times he can point out faults in a design, production step or marketing and the originator of the idea would get offended rather than learn from his mistakes.

"It takes a lot more than just coming up with an idea and saying, 'I'm gonna make a million dollars from this.'"

There are also provisions to be followed when a patent is granted. After 17 years patents expire and become public property, but during that time there are also three renewal periods that must be applied for or the patent becomes public domain.

"A patent is not a guarantee from the government," Curry said. "A patent is just an exclusive right to make and use a product. The inventor will have to defend himself. He cannot rely on the government to do it for him."

Also, the patent office will not accept a prototype, but it is very advisable to make one for two reasons: one, you need to know that it works and two, it's necessary to show your investors what you have."

Heat

Roy Eckberg, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in St. Louis, said temperatures Wednesday were expected to reach 90-95 degrees, with a heat index of 100-105 degrees.

For today, Thursday, he said the forecast was for partly sunny with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms, a high near 90 degrees and lows in the 70s.

"Which is right near average for St. Louis," he said. "It doesn't look too out of the ordinary."

Over the weekend, he said highs would be in the upper 80s to lower 90s, lows in the 70s, with a chance of showers or thunderstorms.

Eckberg said that except for a few days of abnormally high temperatures, July has been "pretty normal."

The two hottest days so far this summer were June 25 and July 6, both hitting 96 degrees.

"By no means any records, but still on the hot side," he said.

At SEMC, Gauzen said they were getting their fans and water bottles ready to treat patients.

So far, she said they treated several people for heat exhaustion the weekend of June 26 — most from the drag races at Gateway International Raceway and one elderly woman last week.

She added that high temperatures this early may "catch some people off guard."

The worst case is heat stroke when the body loses the ability to cool itself. Symptoms include a high body temperature, 106 degrees or higher; hot and dry skin; and a rapid and strong pulse. The victim also may be delirious.

In extreme cases, heat stroke can lead to death, and a person with those symptoms should seek immediate medical attention.

"Heat exhaustion is a less serious but still dangerous illness," Gauzen said. "This happens when a person loses water and salts through perspiration, and does not replenish them."

Symptoms of heat exhaustion may be a pale or clammy skin, profuse sweating, dizziness, cramps or weakness.

Gauzen said to avoid heat-related problems, people need to plan ahead and use their heads.

Gauzen said they were especially concerned about children and the elderly.

People with elderly friends or relatives should check them.

"Once heat starts to affect them, they may become more impaired," she said.

For the rest, she said the normal rules avoid alcoholic beverages, drink lots of water, eat light meals and stay indoors — will help people avoid most problems.

sung, a red firework exploded, and when "blue" was sung, a blue pyrotechnic exploded.

"The whole program was a real success," Polivik said. "It's the only time of the year when the whole community gets together with family. It's a real treat for our community."

Some of the highlights included $100 savings bonds awarded to three high school students who displayed exceptional patriotism. Hillary Acris won for her essay on patriotism, while Ryan Moenster and Jacob Kamphoepfer staged a debate between Benjamin Franklin (Moenster) and John Adams (Kamphoepfer).

Other highlights included concerts by the gospel group The Imperials, as well as the 108-member Community Choir and the Casuals.

Although it is difficult to get an accurate crowd estimate, Polivik said various sources told him anywhere between 15,000 to 18,000 people attended. Activity was a little slow for the carnival on Thursday and Friday, but crowds surged into Wilson Park on Saturday and Sunday.

"There were huge crowds on hand for the fireman's rodeo and the car show," he said.

The Steering Committee for Patriots in the Park met Tuesday night and is already planning on next year's celebration, Polivik said. They discussed how well the celebration went and how they can improve on next year.

The steering committee's importance cannot be underestimated, he said, and they deserve all the credit. Members include Marilyn Baumann, Roy Boyer, Keith Burton, Jack W. Calve Jr., Brad Eavenson, Margaret Hopkins, Linda Irwin, Charles King Sr., Dewey Melton, Larry Zotti and Dave Polivik.

that at about 8:45 a.m. he had stopped his company van at an Amoco service station on Manchester Road in Ballwin, and entered the store. When he returned to the van, the suspect was sitting in the passenger seat.

As the victim entered the vehicle, the suspect allegedly displayed a "nickel-plated" semi-automatic handgun and ordered him to drive.

The victim said he followed the suspect's directions and drove "directly" to the Old Alton Road-Oldenberg Road area.

During the drive, the suspect spoke only to give directions, and although he never verbally threatened the victim, the suspect reportedly pointed the weapon at him when the victim's car telephone rang. The suspect then threw the telephone out of the vehicle.

When they reached Old Alton Road, the suspect ordered the victim to stop, then ran into a field near the roadway. The victim then drove to the service station and called police.

Police from the Illinois State Police, Sheriff's Department and a St. Louis County police helicopter searched the area, but the suspect was not found.

The victim was not harmed. On Wednesday, the Sheriff's Department released a composite sketch of the suspect.

Anybody with information should call the Sheriff's Department at 682-4433.

Morgan Guenther, is circulating petitions that are being presented to Congress by Jerry Costello's office under H.R. Bill 3710. The bill would exonerate Captain McVay of the "Indy" from any wrongdoing and would have a presidential citation given to the crew of this magnificent ship, which participated in 10 battles in World War II.

Friends of Cavins also are assisting her in this drive for petitions. Jodi Weidner, a Granite City resident, is the daughter of Joe Consiglio, who went down with the "Indy."

Hollywood is in the process of making a movie of the disaster titled "Abandon Ship," starring Kevin Costner as the captain. It will take eight months to make. The timing of the film follows the recent disaster movie "Titanic," which drew tremendous response from the public.

It seems appropriate to have a film of the "Indy." Both films about these great ships bring to mind the great loss of life that perhaps could have been prevented.

From July 29, 1999, to Aug. 2, 1999, in Indianapolis, a reunion will be held for survivors of the "Indy" and their families, friends and guests. The event will pay tribute to the sailors who did not make it and thank the survivors.

Splash City set to open Saturday

By Alene Hill
Staff writer

The water features are working, the concession stand is being stocked and the deck furniture is in place. All that remains before the ribbon cutting ceremony of Collinsville Area Recreation District's Splash City on Saturday are a few inspections and minor details — nothing that will prevent the long-awaited opening of the facility, said CARD Executive Director Mark Badasch.

"All the water features are working and we have to address some small items," Badasch said. "We have some landscaping and the boat pond that needs to be completed, but that's all that's left."

The CARD board ironed out opening day details at its meeting Tuesday night. Ribbon cutting is set for 10:45 a.m. Saturday before the park's official opening at 11 a.m.

The park will be open daily from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. through Labor Day.

Badasch said that the CARD office, the Collinsville Chamber of Commerce and even nearby Family Fun Center have been receiving phone calls about the water park's opening.

"The Ameritech Information Office called and said they had been inundated with requests for the phone number," he said. "So we did the listing over the phone. Family Fun Center said they have been getting around 75 to 100 phone calls a day."

All of which shows, Badasch said, that heat-seekers are looking forward to the opening.

Complications from the area's wet winter and spring have plagued the project, preventing the anticipated opening on Memorial Day and again later in June.

The water park is being built on a 12-acre site in Eastport Plaza, S.M. Wilson of Granite City is the project's general contractor.

Admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children living in the district. The fee for those living outside the district is $8.50 for adults and $6 for children.

Local man admits to hate crime, police say

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

A Granite City man has been charged with a hate crime after allegedly threatening to set a black woman on fire.

Michael G. Baggot, 41, of the 1200 block of N. Ringhaus Avenue, was charged Wednesday with one count of a hate crime, a Class 4 felony. As of late Wednesday afternoon, he was in custody at the Granite City jail. Bond was set at $25,000.

Police said Baggot admitted to waving a lighter and can of lighter fluid at a black woman and threatening her.

The incident occurred at about 8 p.m. Tuesday in the 1800 block of Delmar.

According to reports, two black women went to the apartment of Baggot's girlfriend to see about a window fan the woman had promised to give them. While the women were talking, Baggot came in and allegedly became abusive.

"He was profane with the use of the 'N' word," said Maj. Rip Pomeroy of the Granite City Police Department.

He then allegedly showed the black women the lighter and fluid, flicked the lighter and then motioned as if he was going to pour the fluid on one of the women.

The two women fled, went to a telephone and called police. When officers arrived at the girlfriend's home, Baggot allegedly told officers what he had done and was arrested immediately.

"He promptly repeated everything to the cops," Pomeroy said. Pomeroy said the girlfriend's story matched those of the two black women.

"She didn't even stand up for him," Pomeroy said.

AROUND THE AREA

Here's what happened around the Metro East in the past week:

East St. Louis

Compliance to sanitation code stressed

"It's a dirty job, but everybody's got to do it." That's the motto for East St. Louis' first Code Enforcement Week, an attempt July 5-11 to inform residents about the city's sanitation code.

At a kickoff event Monday, city officials stressed citizen compliance with the code as being a crucial part of making East St. Louis a cleaner place to live.

"We can all do a better job of cleaning up," City Manager Curtis Galloway said.

The event is targeting illegal dumping, overgrown vegetation, abandoned vehicles, derelict structures, trash-straw yards and littering.

"We have certain elements in the community that prefer just to throw trash around," Galloway said. "I don't want to hear that it's people from other cities — it's us. So, let's participate and let's try to clean this city."

Program will assist home buyers

Potential homeowners looking to buy a house in East St. Louis now have a financial incentive. The Illinois Housing Development Authority is offering the Mortgage Credit Certificate Program to people who have not bought a home for three or more years.

The program allows 25 percent of the mortgage interest to qualify as a tax credit. The remaining 75 percent of the mortgage interest qualifies as an itemized tax deduction.

Monroe County

Housing starts fewer this year

The growth of housing starts across the rural expanses of Monroe County isn't dead, but it does appear to be dying.

According to the Monroe County Zoning Office's recent semi-annual report, 30 building permits for single-family residences were issued through the first six months of 1998.

In 1993, 47 building permits were issued in the first six months. Eighty-eight were issued during the rest of 1993.

In 1994, a flood-rebuilding year, 249 new homes went up. The drop-off began in 1995 when 90 building permits were issued, followed by 87 in 1996 and 73 last year.

The drop-off began in 1995 when 90 building permits were issued, followed by 87 in 1996 and 73 last year.

County Zoning Administrator Mike Fausz said the figures don't necessarily indicate growth is subsiding, but instead point to the success of the county's planning efforts.

Belleville

Outer Belt tops city agenda

An Outer Belt Expressway connecting Highway 161 at Highway 158 to the J.B. Bridge, a face-lift for North Illinois Street, and the annexation of two future Metrolink station sites were all discussed at Monday's City Council meeting.

Although the Expressway will most likely be a 15-20 year project, support is being sought now by municipalities and government entities that will be involved in its development.

"It will be a connector from 164 on the east to 255 on the west," said Mike Malloy, Belleville's director of economic development and planning.

The Expressway received unanimous support from more than 50 area residents and leaders at a recent meeting hosted by Belleville. Kern said among those supporting the long-range development is St. Clair County Board Chairman John Barlow.

The Illinois Department of Transportation will be looking at the feasibility of the Outer Belt Expressway. In Belleville, North Illinois Street from E Street to J Street may undergo almost a complete facelift, providing Council members endorse the North Illinois corridor study developed by PB Booker Associates of St. Louis.

Cahokia

Sign-up under way for charter

Fort Bowman Academy Charter School will conduct its second registration for students today.

In the first registration, last month, the school registered 71 students. The school has a maximum capacity of 120 students in kindergarten through sixth grade.

Fort Bowman is the St. Louis area's first charter school. Charter schools are public institutions that operate under a contract among charter organizers, the local school district and the state.

Charter schools can be closed if they fail to meet their educational goals.

The Cahokia Board of Education ratified a final contract Wednesday and submitted it to the Illinois State Board of Education for approval, Superintendent Bob Bresnahan said.

Papa John's 'Works' into Glen Carbon

By Paul Mackie
Staff writer

Papa John's Pizza is ready to bring "The Works" to Glen Carbon.

"We keep it simple, serving just pizza and bread sticks," said Larry Hicks, a construction manager with Papa John's corporate office in Louisville, Ky. "Our most popular pizza is called 'The Works.' It's a pizza with everything on it."

Hicks hopes construction will get under way immediately, with a tentative opening date set for mid-September.

Papa John's Pizza will be located just north of the new Applebee's Neighborhood Grill and Bar on Illinois 159. That busy stretch is also the future home for Popeye's Chicken, Den-ny's, Jack-in-the-Box and other restaurants to be announced soon.

"We're looking forward to getting out there," Hicks said. "St. Louis has been a good market for us and we're expanding into that market."

He said Papa John's currently has 1,680 stores in 42 states and is opening a new store about every day. He said by the time the Glen Carbon restaurant opens, there will be more than 1,700 nationwide, with the first international location soon to open in Mexico.

Hicks said the 1,600-square-foot Glen Carbon location will be the restaurant's "prototype image building." It will be one of the first Papa John's to feature a pick-up window. The restaurant will also have delivery and carry-out service.

Buildings getting face-lifts

MADISON COUNTY

Face-lifts on a couple of county buildings were completed recently, and similar work began this week at the Madison County Courthouse.

Marty Siglock, the county's administrator of buildings and lands, said siding work on the first floor of the Madison County Avenue was completed last week.

The siding will soon be painted by county staff. The annex is home to the county's community development house, and employment and training centers.

Also last week, Kehrer Brothers Roofing of New Memphis completed the $6,000 job of replacing the roof on the Madison County Historical Museum on North Main Street.

"We had a busy week last week," Siglock said.

While last week was busy for outlying buildings, this week will bring a start to work at the courthouse.

"We're putting the courtrooms back in A-1 shape," Siglock said. "It's time for them to be repaired county pride."

Painters began coating the walls in the third-floor courtrooms and chambers to match the new carpet, which is also being installed this week.

Adding new carpet is a $30,000 project being done by Commercial Floors of St. Louis.

Siglock said the big project will be restoration of the exterior of the courthouse, which will include tuck-pointing and cleaning the stone walls.

He expects the cost to be about $200,000, but the bids won't likely be advertised for a few more months.

"We won't start the project until around October," Siglock said.

Tickets for the open house to honor legendary Collinsville High School basketball coach Vergil Fletcher are being snapped up at a rather quick pace.

Elwood Sapp, who is helping to coordinate the event, said 150 tickets have been sold so far. He is hoping more than 200 tickets will be sold for the event, scheduled for 7-10 p.m. Aug. 15 at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Maryville.

"We've talked to enough people who said they are going to be there," Sapp said. "A lot of out-of-town people have still been difficult to get a hold of. I think a lot of them who live close will probably just show up."

Former basketball players such as Ray Sonnenberg, Denny Pace, Terry Bethel and Norm Schaulat have already purchased their tickets for the night. Former football players Don Bulcroft, Gene Swain and Don Bitzer have also purchased tickets.

Downtown Imprints U-17 wins tournament in Indy

Team sweeps through six foes for championship

Downtown Imprints, an under-17 boys soccer team based in Troy, captured the championship in the Independence Day Tournament Sunday in Lawrence, Ind., a suburb of Indianapolis.

Downtown topped the nine-team field by going 6-0 in the tournament. It swept through its pool play, posting a 10-0 victory against Saints Avengers (Indianapolis), beating Southern United (Georgetown, Ind.) 8-0, blanking West Central United (Lima, Ohio) 3-0, and rolling over Saints FC (Heron) of Indianapolis 4-0.

The Imprints had a much more difficult time in the semifinals and championship game, edging Nelson County (Bartonsville, Ky.) 2-1 on a penalty kick shootout and topping Saints FC (Brown) of Indianapolis 3-1 in the title game.

In the semifinal match against Nelson County, goalie Josh Brown of Edwardsville came up big in the shootout, as he stopped the Kentucky team's third and fourth shots. That set up Pat Sparks' winning goal, which gave his team an insurmountable 4-2 edge in the shootout. Others converting for Downtown in the shootout were Mike Lenglet, Kane Sweeney and Adam Emig.

Emig scored his team's only goal in regulation on assists from Sweeney and Ryan Carroll before Kentucky countered in the second half. The two teams played two scoreless five-minute overtime periods before moving into the shootout.

In the title game against the Saints, Downtown scored three first-half goals before cruising in the second half. Todd Bruns, on an assist on a throw-in from Sparks, got the Imprints on board first. Emig also scored on a throw-in from Sparks to make it 2-0 before Matt Gruenert's beautifully crossed pass was knocked in by Sean Gregory in front of the goal to close out the scoring.

Other team members making the trip were Jeremy Bayne, Kurt Schreier, Ryan Jacob, Adam Krebs and Ryan Ossola. Matt Hicks and Gruenert were guest players for the team, which is coached by John Suess.

Downtown, which finished second in this year's Illinois State Cup, the state's most prestigious tournament, will play the Nebraska and Kentucky state Olympic Development teams at the Region 2 Camp next week at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, to conclude its travel season before the players get ready for their high school seasons.

Some of the best young baseball players from around the world are in the area for the next week as part of the 1988 "AA" World Baseball Championships.

The tournament for baseball teams comprised of 15- and 16-year-old boys begins with opening ceremonies at Longacre Park in Fairview Heights on Saturday and will conclude July 19 with the gold-medal game scheduled for 5 p.m.

The week's activities are a reward for an effort that began a year and a half ago to secure the tournament for the Metro East.

"We've held the Pan-Am championships the last three years here," said Kevin Whitworth, who helped lead the efforts of the local organizing committee. "We went to USA Baseball, the national governing body of amateur baseball, and submitted our proposal. There was a site inspection done last August during the Pan-Am games, and we were eventually approved unanimously to host the 'AA' World Baseball Championships."

The United States, which has never won the tournament, will be in a field of 12 teams vying for top honors. This year's field for the fifth annual event includes Ukraine, Czech Republic, Italy, South Africa, Australia, China, Taipei, Japan, South Korea, Mexico, Brazil and Venezuela.

The teams will be divided into two pools with six games played each day in the pools every day through next Wednesday.

The top four teams from each pool will advance to the playoff round, which will conclude with the gold medal contest July 19.

"Every year, a different team has won this tournament," Whitworth said. "It should be a very competitive tournament and the United States team is looking forward to doing well after finishing fifth last season."

The games themselves are only a part of the week-long festivities for Collinsville squads will team up for exhibition games vs. Italy, Australia

For the second straight year, Collinsville will play a role in the international baseball tournament coming to the St. Louis area.

The Collinsville Rockies, a freshman summer baseball team, and the Collinsville Junior Legion Herr Travelers will combine teams to play the Italian and Australian national teams in an exhibition series as part of the "AA" World Baseball Championships (see story above).

After the actual tournament begins Saturday at Longacre Park, Arthur Fletcher Field will be the host site for one of the more anticipated games: Team USA versus Italy, 10 a.m. Monday.

It might not be one of the most important clashes of the event, but it is a nice bit of irony that a community rich in Italian heritage such as Collinsville serves as host site for the game.

Pat Dellamano, coach of the Rockies, is excited about the opportunity and is encouraging his Italian neighbors in the community to support both the exhibition game against Italy at 6:30 p.m. Friday and the Italy-Team USA clash on Monday.

"It's really neat. My great-grandfather came over from Italy, but I am a watered down Italian," Dellamano said. "I'm a weak Italian."

Dellamano may not be able to speak the language but he had a blast when he went to Lambert International Airport earlier this week to greet the Italian team. Only the team manager and one player, who lived in the United States for a while, could speak English. But Dellamano said it didn't matter because everyone spoke the language of baseball.

This is the second year Dellamano has been involved with the international baseball tournaments at Longacre Park. Last year, the Rockies played the Mexican national team in an exhibition game for the Pan-Am Championships.

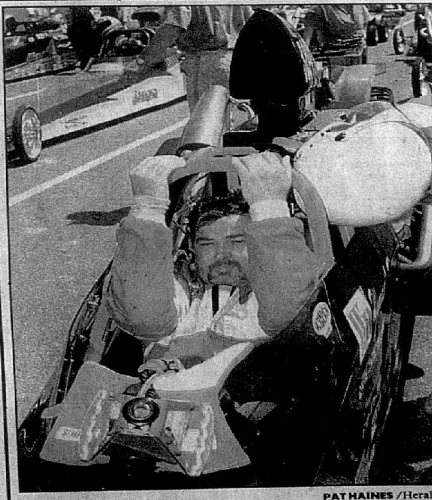

Mexico will play an exhibition game at Fletcher Field 3:30 p.m. Friday against Mount Vernon.

"Some of the kids are pretty excited about it," Dellamano said. "Some are still too young to understand. I don't think the memories will hit them until they get to be an old geezer like me, but they are excited."

Dellamano said the experience for last summer is something he will never forget.

"I taped the game last year. When

Collinsville summer season winds to a close

Asbrook likes the progress team has made, strength of senior class

By Brian Bretsch
Staff writer

As Collinsville High prepares for its last basketball tournament of the summer season in Jacksonville this weekend, Kevin Asbrook says the Kahoks are showing signs of what is to come this winter.

On Monday night, the Kahoks split their two games in the summer league at Belleville Area College. The Kahoks beat Westlin but fell to Mater Dei. Against Mater Dei, the Kahoks played the entire 20 minutes of the first half with only five players because a few of the players were confused as to the start of the Mater Dei game.

Despite that minor setback against the Knights, Collinsville has maintained an above-500 record this summer.

From what he has seen, Asbrook likes the Kahoks chances in the upcoming 1998-99 campaign.

"Talent-wise, we probably have the most talent out of all the teams I have seen," Asbrook said. "But, athletically we're not quite up with the other teams in the area. I think Alton and (Belleville) East will have pretty good teams."

The advantage the Kahoks will have this season is a lineup loaded with seniors. If Asbrook had his way, he would have loved the opportunity to have been a senior this season along with Shaun Moore, Steve Dougherty, Chad Harrington, Jason Michael, Josh Miller and Chris Shaffer. Instead, Asbrook will just enjoy the remaining few weeks of the summer league as the Kahoks coach.

Asbrook said the team has picked up its intensity as the summer season has gone on and the players are understanding their roles, but they still need to play more as a unit and not as individuals. That will come with more practice.

"Not many teams have beaten us," Asbrook said. "We have just beaten ourselves in every game we have lost. The guys are trying to do too much and doing things too fast instead of slowing it down and seeing what you have."

"I don't think they trust each other enough and then they don't rely on each other. When things get bad, everybody tries to do it by themselves. There are not too many people around who can beat a team by themselves. I don't think we have anybody like that."

"The seniors are getting better. They are getting more vocal as far as saying things. Feelings are starting to get out of the way, which needs to get done. Their intensity is getting better."

Moore prepares for senior season with Kahoks

By Brian Bretsch
Staff writer

Shaun Moore's objective for his senior year at Collinsville High is to study hard and just have fun.

He is still several weeks away from having to put his nose into the books, but he already has begun having fun.

However, Moore's definition of fun is probably different than most of his classmates.

Moore's "fun" for the week looks like this: "I begin every day at 8 a.m. reporting to Vergil Fletcher Gymnasium. On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, I was out with his basketball teammates for two hours. On Wednesday, he skips basketball workouts to take part in passing and running drills with the Kahoks football team. On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, he works on his strength and conditioning in the weight room with the football team."

"I'm so drenched when I get home, I just go straight to bed," Moore said. "I'll sleep from about 12:30 to 2 or 3 (p.m.) and get something to eat."

Moore wants to make everything count during the 1998-99 school year. He hopes the Kahoks starting quarterback most of the season but will move over this fall to let junior Derek LeMaster run the offense.

BASKETBALL

Moore will return to his split end position, where he played as a sophomore. He knows his knowledge of reading defenses will be an advantage as he is running his passing routes.

"I have run the patterns and I've seen the patterns being run. As a quarterback, I figured out where the soft spots were in the defense and now I can use that to my advantage and to my strengths," Moore said. "As a wide receiver, I know where those soft spots are going to be at. Derek and I have worked on that."

Moore will be one of Collinsville's go-to players on the football field, the same holds true for him on the hardwood floors.

To add to his "fun," Moore and his Kahok basketball teammates play Tuesday evenings in the summer high school league at Belleville Area College.

He will be one of seven seniors Collinsville's basketball roster this winter. He hopes this role this season will be one where teammates look to get him the ball in the clutch.

"That is part of my game — I like people to look at me at different times when we need to be picked up. I want to be the guy that picks us up," said Moore, who has been a member of the varsity basketball team since his sophomore year. Terry (Tessaro) misses a shot and I was wide open. I don't see, keep shooting because they have a good shooting stroke. I want people to look at me as a team leader. I want people to look at me and say, 'Let's go. Shaun is with this problem. Either it is on the basketball court or off the basketball court.'"

"I think emotions are a big part of my game. When the adrenaline is running through my body, I really don't think about things. I just react. I pay better."

The summer basketball league has afforded Moore the luxury of being able to strengthen his game. He has worked on protecting the ball and bringing the ball up the court in pressure situations. He has also increased his range so he can knock down jumpers in the neighborhood of 15 to 16 feet.

But one of Moore's primary goals this winter will be to introduce younger opposing players to the physical style of varsity basketball.

As a sophomore, Moore was worked over by players like Kimon Green (East St. Louis Lincoln) and Spencer Hughes (East St. Louis). This past winter, Moore had to put up with the likes of Edwardsville's Jon Williams, Granite City's Dustin Brewer and East Collinsville's Shaun Moore is ready to be a force in his senior season of high school basketball.

St. Louis Lincoln's Terrance Slater.

"It was like, 'Geez.' It was hard," Moore said. "I looked back (last year) and said how could I make it because I played against Kwon Green, Spencer Hughes and Dustin Brewer."

"I played against Dustin for two years. That is a strong guy. That guy is strong. I don't look like it. I remember taking charges against him and they hurt. Sometimes I just said, 'Stay down.'"

"Instead of taking the punty this year I want to be the guy dishing all the punishment out and not taking any."

Now that is the kind of "fun" Moore is looking forward to this basketball season.

NEWS IN REVIEW

Editor's note: News in Review provides a summary of some of the past week's stories. This column is intended for out-of-town readers who do not receive the Sunday and Wednesday Press-Record-Journals.

Grant slated for 2 libraries

MADISON-VENICE — The Madison and Venice libraries are receiving more than $60,000 in grants from the Illinois State Office of State's Office.

The grants are two of nearly $3.4 million in "Live & Learn" construction grants awarded to 50 Illinois libraries.

The Venice Public Library, 325 Broadway, received $34,250 to comply with the Americans With Disabilities Act.

The Madison library received $34,282. Part of that will go toward making the bathrooms handicapped accessible, said Library Director Dawn Davis.

The grant will also pay for the installation of a new circulation desk and other improvements.

State airing teen campaign

METRO EAST — Helping teens make responsible health decisions and abstain from high-risk activities such as unprotected sex is the focus of a new public awareness campaign funded by the Illinois Department of Public Health.

The program, "Respect Your Mind, Protect Your Body," includes a series of radio ads that began airing Wednesday on several local radio stations and will run through September. It is part of an ongoing effort to increase Illinois adolescents' awareness of the risk of AIDS/HIV, sexually transmitted diseases and unintended pregnancies.

"We'd like to empower teens with ways to handle sticky situations," said Beth Richman, a spokeswoman for the program. "We want to give them knowledge on how to behave properly."

According to information from IDPH, as of June 1998, a total of 5,406 cases of HIV infections have been reported in Illinois. Residents aged 20-29, a group as likely to have contracted the virus as adolescents, it also said, 4,998 cases of chlamydia, 2,981 cases of gonorrhea and 106 cases of syphilis were reported last year in teens aged 10-19.

"This is a new tactic and this is the most aggressive," Richman said. "We hope to lower the incidents of HIV/AIDS and STDs, and also lower the number of unintended pregnancies in this state."

VFW salutes Man of the Year

COLLINSVILLE — There are 97,800 members from 428 Veterans of Foreign Wars posts in Illinois.

But only one can be Man of the Year. For 1997-98, it's Joe Berg.

The Collinsville resident, a member of Post 5691, received his honor June 25 during a state convention.

"As the VFW's state public relations director, Berg is used to giving honors. Part of his yearly duties is to hand out checks to 76 of his fellow members, four from each of the state's four regions. But when it came time for the VFW to honor him, Berg was a little unprepared.

Berg said the honor is based not only on accomplishments within the organization, of which he has plenty, but also outside. Between veteran and church posts, Berg has held as many as seven elected and/or appointed positions at one time.

In the local VFW, he is chaplain, public relations chairman and takes care of insurance. He is also a district chairman in addition to his state post.

He was post commander three times, each time earning all-state status, the group's highest honor.

Officials blast court consolidation

MADISON COUNTY — A proposal to eliminate satellite courts in Madison County communities is getting a cool reception from the mayor of Alton, the Madison County state's attorney and the chief judge.

"That would really create a hardship on our citizens," Mayor Don Sandridge said.

The issue was brought to a consulting study, submitted to the County Board recently, recommending closing the satellite courts as part of a solution to a growing space problem in the Madison County Courthouse.

Bank merger claims branches

GRANITE CITY — Central Bank will combine its banking network with Mercantile Bancorporation in mid-September, Mercantile officials have announced.

On Sept. 21, Central Bank (a subsidiary of FirstBank) will officially change its name to Mercantile Bank N.A.

As a part of a previously announced merger, Mercantile and Central Bank of Illinois Co. (Central is a subsidiary of FirstBank) will combine banking networks.

Six of the 16 Central Bank locations in the Metro East will close. In addition, four Mercantile Banks will close effective Sept. 18.

The Central locations to close are: 130 S. Main St., Hecker; 11 S. State, Freeburg; Belleville Shop 'N' Save at 800 Carlyle; 1001 N. Hart Food & Drug, 900 E. U.S. 50, 155 N. Duncan, Marine; and 2400 Madison Ave., Granite City.

North Venice Annual Reunion held June 14

The 18th North Venice Annual Reunion was held on June 14 in the Madison Recreation Center.

The hall was decorated in honor of Flag Day — in red, white and blue, with top hats and a flag in the center of each table made by Tina Cuvor, who worked hard, with help from her sister, Cindy Cuvor, and her mother, Gloria Barnett, and husband, George, and Elaine Thick and Harold and Charlotte McKinney.

A gift for being the oldest went to Zelda Burns of Livingston.

Jay Campbell of Cocoa, Fla., traveled the farthest. A memorial table with candles and roses with the names of each person who had passed on since the last reunion was also impressive. Entertainment was by Brian Ballard, an area magician.

Twenty names were drawn, and each received a gift. A pollock picnic dinner was enjoyed by Rocky and Clea (Tur) Mayes, Jenner (King) Hefner and Clinton Tucker of Collinsville; Joe Mikolaszuk and David and Dorothy Crews of Edwardsville; Bob and Katy Briles of Nashville; Eileen Rogers of Nebo; Carol Jarenger of O'Fallon; Bill and Evelyn Titchener of Swansea; Butch and Gildel Burns of Staunton; Carol and Macy (Werner) Highfield of Wood River; Carl Essington and Reba Godic of Alton; C.R. and Maxine Wheeler, Todd Lang-ren, Sheryl (Kane) Langren and Darville Wheeler of Lakewood, Colo.; Rafe, Fay and Jeffery Varady and Sody Daisy of Tennessee; Roberta (Vince) Sitek of Madison Heights, Mich.; Dale Gant of Porter, Texas; and Marilyn (Wheeler) Adams of Hot Springs, Colo.

Residing from Missouri were Mildred Herbert of Ferguson; Patsy Burns, Feldmont; Ray Arnold, St. Louis; Norma Jessen of Findstaff, St. Charles; Madean (Grindstaff) King, Shell Knob and Alvie and Dorsey Thonal, St. Louis; and Kenneth Grindstaff of St. Charles.

He's a pen pal to the stars

Metro East man's hobby captured in photograph albums

By Cheryl A. Moody
Staff writer

Shirley Temple Black, Paul Newman, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Robert De Niro, Dean Martin, Debbie Reynolds, and hundreds of other celebrities can all be found in photo albums at Earl Carter's home.

Carter, of Fairview Heights, has collected pictures of stars since the early 1980s. He recently gave about half of his collection to his son, Leland Carter, because of the space the photo albums were consuming at his home. He has more than 50 albums.

The hobby started as something fun to do for Carter and his late first wife, Lola Carter. The two would find pictures and send them to different celebrities asking for their autographs.

Carter said he used to send $2 to a company in Michigan for a list of movie stars and their addresses. He said the list would highlight the stars that were known for autographing and returning pictures.

"(The late) Elizabeth Montgomery called me twice to make sure I'd gotten the pictures," Carter said.

The first time Montgomery called, Carter hadn't received the pictures yet. So, she called him a second time to verify its receipt.

"She wanted me to very well know that she was concerned," Carter said.

Montgomery wasn't the only celebrity to call Carter. Another late movie star, Ida Lupino, who acted in Humphrey Bogart movies, also called Carter one time.

"My son, Leland, asked her if she worked for the Illinois Central Railroad," Carter said. "She told him, 'No, I'm from Hollywood — I'm a movie star.'"

Lupino was also one of the first female movie directors.

Other stars have actually written Carter letters. Ella Raines, another deceased movie star who acted with John Wayne, wrote Carter about her divorce.

"It was real personal," Carter said of Raines' letter.

Or instead of just signing a name, some stars will write Carter a personal note right on their picture. Annette Funicello wrote, "Earl — many thanks for such a wonderful letter. Happiness always, Annette."

How does Carter get the stars to respond?

"You write them — you brag on them — you tell them what you like about them," Carter said.

Carter's wife, Darlene, said, "Earl has a real gift with words. He praises and praises."

The Carter family has rubbed elbows with other stars. In fact, Leland Carter was given a standing ovation for singing on stage with Patti LaBelle.

"My son went to see Patti LaBelle," Earl Carter said. "She recognized him and asked him to get on stage and sing with her."

Carter said his son, who has seen LaBelle perform on several different occasions, always sits in the front. LaBelle even sent flowers and her personal brand hand creme to nursing home residents where Leland Carter works.

Carter's picture list is endless — The Lennon Sisters, John Travolta, Shirley MacLaine, silent movie stars, Robert Wagner and his late wife, Natalie Wood, Harrison Ford, Kate Capshaw who is married to Steven Spielberg, Dennis Weaver and James Cagney are only a few of the others.

Carter can tell you the stars' names, who they dated, who they were married to, who they divorced, movies they starred in and many other interesting facts.

In recent years, Carter has expanded his horizons to include pictures of television reporters, politicians and Miss America contestants.

Channel 5 even thanked Carter for being part of their family.

Darlene will tell you that Earl's never met a movie star he didn't like.

"I say if you've seen one, you've seen them all. But he doesn't feel that way," she said.

Senior artist was born to paint

Heidi Von Weitzer-Schmith is your typical '90s woman on the go.

Whether she is working in her art studio or teaching art to young students, Weitzer-Schmith's lifestyle is hectic.

She said she expects her lifestyle to become even busier now that she plans to teach art classes to children who have AIDS and cancer at Cardinal Glennon Hospital in St. Louis.

"I like to work with kids," she said. "And I want to give something back to society."

Von Weitzer-Schmith, who now makes her home in O'Fallon, grew up in Austria.

Her family attained great prominence in manufacturing with fabric mills and diesel motors.

In fact, her great-grandfather achieved even more recognition when the Emperor of Austria bestowed on him the title of "Count."

As a child, Von Weitzer-Schmith recalls doing Austrian farm paintings and taking portrait classes.

"It was put in my cradle," she said about her talent.

Her parents owned a department store in Giessen, West Germany. Von Weitzer-Schmith said the store exposed her to fashion and colors.

Von Weitzer-Schmith's great-aunt also was an artist in Austria. She donated all of the money she made to start an orphanage.

Von Weitzer-Schmith has completed extensive art training in Austria, Italy, Germany and the United States. She studied art at the Schule Schloss Schwarzenberg, a part of the University of Munich.

Von Weitzer-Schmith also served as a building coordinator for a Philippines' hospital, where she later adopted her daughter, Stefani.

She and several designers from the St. Louis-area recently remodeled an 85-year-old German Gothic home in Belleville.

"I work very hard, very long," she said. "But being creative, you don't get tired. When I start something, I don't want to let go."

That's especially true when Von Weitzer-Schmith volunteers her time and talents with children who are less fortunate and terminally ill.

"When I can do this, it makes me count my own blessings," she said. "And it's a good time for the children. I'm really concerned about children and want to see the succeed."

Schiffman's review of studies from 1966 through June 1997 was published in a special issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, a theme edition on aging.

Besides reducing the elderly's interest in eating, which can lead to malnutrition, loss of taste and smell can put them at risk of food poisoning because spoilage may escape their detection, Schiffman said.

And some research indicates that a loss of smell itself diminishes immune response, she said.

Schiffman recommends that flavor enhancers such as fruit juices and meat stocks be used to encourage the elderly to consume a nutritious diet.

Such enhancers have been used for 25 years to increase consumption of nutrient-dense foods by patients with illnesses that cause dangerous weight loss, she said.

An expert not associated with the review said it highlights a large problem that is often underestimated by many doctors and caretakers of the elderly.

"People often don't even complain of it," said Dr. Natasha Mirza of the Smell and Taste Center at the University of Pennsylvania Medical Center in Philadelphia.

Loss of taste and smell are unrecognized risks to elderly

Elderly people often lose so much of their ability to taste and smell that they are in danger of malnutrition, immune problems or food poisoning, says an expert who reviewed existing research on the problem.

"Sometimes these losses are gradual and people can figure out what's wrong," said psychologist Susan S. Schiffman of Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.

"They know they're not getting pleasure from food, and they'll blame it on something else," such as food not being as good as when they were young, she said in a telephone interview.

Although some sensory loss is normal with age, loss of taste can come especially from the effects of medicines, surgical procedures and diseases such as Parkinson's and Alzheimer's, she said.

For the last three years, a national effort headquartered in Washington state has given the professional rodeo athlete something to cheer for — chiropractors.

The Tacoma-based Wrangler Sports Chiropractic Program coordinates about 300 chiropractors in 12 regions throughout the U.S. and trains them to understand the hazards of rodeo competition and to effectively treat rodeo event-related injuries.

At almost 300 rodeos per year, chiropractors volunteer their time to offer relief and maintenance care for these competitors to help heighten their performance potential.

For some cowboys, it is their first experience with chiropractic. Others find it convenient to have a chiropractor on-site without having to find time in a busy schedule to see a chiropractor in town.

Wrangler Inc., the manufacturer of western wear, is the primary sponsor of the program.

In 1997, Wrangler representatives approached Tacoma chiropractor Ed Corley, who had offered chiropractic care at rodeo events for several years.

Together, Wrangler, Corley and a host of other chiropractors helped coordinate a nationwide rodeo program which continues to grow in popularity among rodeo athletes, the chiropractic profession and the public.

In 1999, the Illinois Association of Home and Community Education will be celebrating its 75th anniversary. The conference will be held at the Holiday Inn in Champaign. Special plans are being made.

Some of the lesson programs scheduled for 1999 include "Impact of Media Violence on Children," "Healthy Indoor Activities for American Homes," "Are You Listening?," "Landscaping with Perennials," and "Eating Right When Eating Away From Home."

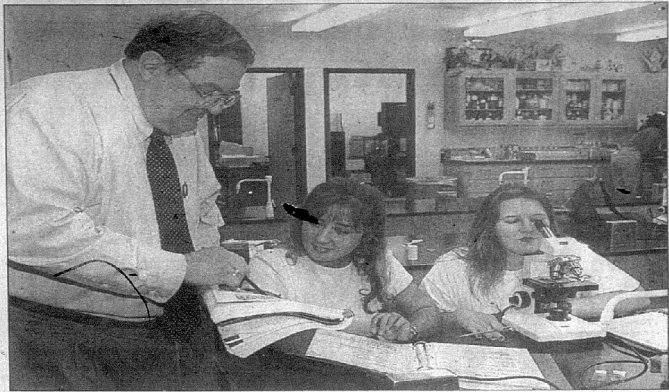

Betty Blumberg (nee Porter) grew up in rural St. Jacob and graduated from St.

Jacob High School in 1954. She and her husband, Harold, have been married since 1959 and live in rural Marine. Betty is the mother of two sons, H.R. and Jim, and has a daughter-in-law, Tammy, and two granddaughters, Jessica and Jennifer.

Chemistry instructor Linda Dawkins, left, watches as GCC student Beth Culver of Edwardsville fills a buret to perform an oxidation reduction titration.

College targets science, math fears

Memorizing the periodic table and monitoring the slow growth of a blue crystal in a beaker is not all there is to chemistry.

Although these things may come up in a chemistry course, science instructors on Belleville Area College's Granite City Campus are striving to eliminate the anxiety that many students have when it comes to math, science and the scientific world.

"Chemistry is life," said Linda Dawkins, Granite City campus chemistry instructor and Process Operations Technology certificate program coordinator. "There's so much in the classroom that you can teach which relates to everyday life."

One thing that Dawkins teaches in her science courses is that chemistry does have several practical applications. Some of these applications will be essential to students completing the new PTEC program that is set to begin this fall at GCC, 4950 Maryville Road.

The only one of its kind in Illinois, the PTEC certificate program is designed to prepare students for the process operations industry after only three semesters.

In addition to the PTEC courses, GCC offers a non-science-major chemistry course, General Chemistry, which usually is required by several of the Allied Health programs, as well as the science-major chemistry courses, Inorganic Chemistry I and II. Other science courses offered at GCC include a large selection of biology courses, as well as earth science courses.

"I think what students need is a chance to see that they can grasp scientific principles. Then it's all a matter of taking that confidence and putting it to use in the classroom."

Linda Dawkins
Chemistry instructor

Many of BAC's career-oriented programs require the study of biology. In addition, the courses for both the PTEC and chemistry programs are based heavily upon scientific principles and chemical processes. Math then becomes important when converting standard measurements to metric units.

That's why Dawkins and GCC biology instructor Richard Melinder want to help students become more comfortable with science and its applications in the everyday world.

"As an undergraduate you are highly influenced by science professors," said Melinder. "It has a profound effect when a teacher tells you that you have some ability. So, a science instructor can't be aloof. They have to have that love of people and of the subject itself."

Melinder also pointed out that being aware of students and their needs within a science course is essential for them to let go of the anxiety.

"Teaching is a people business," he said.

Dawkins hopes to someday develop a pre-chemistry course, where students can "get their feet wet" and work through their math and science anxieties before getting to an introductory science course. As a person who had science anxiety herself when she started college, Dawkins knows the importance of letting go of those fears that can affect a student's choice of career.

"I think what students need is a chance to see that they can grasp scientific principles," she said. "Then it's all a matter of taking that confidence and putting it to use in the classroom."

For more information on any of BAC's science courses or programs, call Linda Dawkins at (618) 931-0600, ext. 606, or Industrial Training Center Director Jim Moore at (618) 931-0600, ext. 600.

Take care with your car's lights

How often have you had to brake suddenly with another driver right on your tail? Your eyes dart to the rearview mirror, hoping he'll see your brake lights in time.

But what if your brake lights aren't working properly? There's better than a 50/50 chance they're NOT, according to figures from a survey by American Automobile Club of Cleveland, Ohio.

They found 55 percent of vehicles checked had brake lights that needed some kind of repairs. This was by far the most prevalent mechanical discrepancy found during a Car Care Clinic.

Bob Knop, manager of the Club's Approved Auto Repair Department, which conducts the clinics, says most problems were found with the third brake light, generally because of a burned out bulb.

Our subconscious response to lighting "We've grown to depend on lighting to signal our intentions," says Jack Oliver, manager for the G.E. Automotive Lighting Division. "We respond almost subconsciously to fellow motorists' turn signals, brake lights or emergency flashers. It's a form of communication as vital to driving as road signs and center line marking. When they're missing we're unaware of the danger ahead."

Another common lighting problem, according to Oliver, is found on vehicles with four light systems with separate units for high and low beams. Because the high beam lamps are replaced less often the lens is subjected to years of abuse from pebbles and other road debris. Eventually hair-line cracks develop and moisture works its way inside, corroding the reflector. The unit may appear to be working OK but it is not putting out as much light as it should.

Lights on for safety "Some day it may be wide spread practice in the U.S., as it is in Canada and Sweden, that the headlights be turned on whenever the car is driven. It's a proven safety measure and already is the law in the U.S. on two-wheeled vehicles where lights automatically turn on with the ignition switch. Obviously, they are more visible to other drivers," says Oliver.

"An Avis traveler safety study showed vehicles with daytime running lights (DRL) had a better accident record than those not so equipped."

But lights are worthless if they are not working, Oliver emphasizes. All exterior lights should be checked periodically, not only for burned out bulbs and flashers but also for poor illumination of headlights due to damaged reflectors.

The best way to check your system is to have one person turn on the lights, the emergency flashers and turn signals and apply the brakes while someone else walks around the vehicle to see that everything is working.

It's also a good habit during every gas fill-up to check for dirt (and ice) on all lenses, front and rear. To help maintain cleanliness you can apply a glass treatment such as RAIN-X to help repel rain, sleet, and snow.

Proper headlight aim is important. At one time or another, most of us have been blinded by the glare of oncoming headlights. You flash your high beams to signal the oncoming driver to dim his lights. He responds by turning on his high beams, indicating it was low beams that had been blinding you. They were aimed too high.

Are you sure your headlights are not blinding others? Here, from G.E., is the recommended way to check headlight aim.

1) Put your car on a 35-40 foot stretch of flat or evenly sloped pavement such as a driveway facing a wall or garage door.

2) Shine your low beams on the door from 2 to 3 feet away and outline the bright spots on the door with a pencil or tape.

3) Back the car to about 25 feet from the door. The top of the low beams should shine no higher than the top of the marks on the door or lower than the center of the marked circle. If your vehicle has fog headlights, the center of the high beam (the inner or lower low beam) should align with the top of the low-beam marks.

Small touch-ups can really add up

Homeowners (and real estate agents alike) love to point out when a house has "character."

It's a word used by those who need a positive spin for all the chips, scuffs, dents, dings and faded appearances that create that worn, lived-in look.

But many of us would gladly undertake a little "character assassination" to improve the look of our homes.

It's easy to wake up a tired house with paint by simply adding a little sheen and color to high-traffic areas," says Linda Feldman, brand manager for Dulux Paint.

A small face lift, rather than extensive surgery, is what many people elect to do for areas that are subjected to much wear and tear. And they're finding that minor touch-ups help create a new look as well as add value to a home.

"For those surfaces under siege, consumers are hungry for quick and easy decorating ideas, and that's where trim paints come in," says Feldman.

Active Areas Need Protection

Trim paints are popular because they not only add a shiny clean gloss to a door, window or cabinet, but they're also designed to protect these surfaces from damage and fading.

Trims are characterized by their high-gloss or gloss sheen. The higher the gloss level of the paint, the tougher the film.

According to Feldman, trim paints are best for:

- Surfaces that require much washing and stain removal.
- Surfaces that tend to attract dirt, grease and mildew.
- Areas that are likely to experience fading.

Window trims, which are subjected to rain and standing water.

Feldman is quick to add that interior trim paints aren't just for windows and doors anymore. These paints are taking on a whole new look as they're now a part of many decorative themes and techniques.

It's not unusual to see high sheen trim paints on ceilings and windows. And they've become a desirable choice for hallways, playrooms and kitchens. It makes sense to use them wherever there's a lot of action going on," says Feldman.

And outside the home, the popularity of exterior door and trim finishes hasn't faded at all the past few years. The painting of doors and trims remains the number one do-it-yourself exterior project for consumers.

In fact, more than one-third of all exterior paint sold today is used specifically for doors and trim. The main reason is that regardless of the substrate of the home (vinyl, brick, aluminum), there's usually a door or window that requires paint.

When selecting trim paints, consider the following:

- For exterior paints, look for products that resist peeling, cracking, blistering and fading, and have a mildew-resistant coating.

For interior trim paints, pick one that stands up to constant scrubbing and washing without coming off.

Make sure the paint is "non-blocking" so that it won't stick to windows and doors.

Re-Decorate with Minor Touch-Ups

"Many of us today just don't have the time to undertake the task of painting an entire room," says Feldman. "And especially for those with kids, a piecemeal approach to painting rooms and surfaces makes the most sense."

For many whole-room makeovers have given way to interiors that evolve through smaller projects. The same can be said of exterior jobs where homeowners prefer to start with trim work on simple projects like the front door, shutters or window

Consumers don't typically start from scratch; they prefer to rework existing areas and add new sparks to tired-looking rooms.

Besides, working with trim paints is viewed by many homeowners as a fun job.

Using trims is such a simple process that people consider it more of a home decorating project than a maintenance project," says Feldman. "Also, working with trim paints is a great way to get your feet wet for larger, more ambitious paint jobs."

88 years early, 'Brigadoon' is back

Lerner and Loewe musical opens two-week run tonight on SIUE stage

The mythic town of Brigadoon only appeared every 100 years, according to ancient legend. But "Brigadoon" — the musical — is returning some 88 years early to the stage at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

The Lerner and Loewe classic opens at 7:30 tonight under the direction of Peter Reynolds, who starred in the musical the first time it was staged at SIUE in 1986.

Reynolds, who is artistic director of the HealthWorks Theatre Company in Chicago, has chosen to rejoin two of the cast members from that original SIUE production of "Brigadoon," the Lerner and Loewe classic. Eric Barnett and Paula Beals again are cast in the hit musical, the former as a member of the current cast and the latter as choreographer.

"Brigadoon" will be staged at 7:30 p.m. tonight, Friday, Saturday and Sunday and July 16-19 and at 2 p.m. July 19 in SIUE's Katherine Dunham Hall theater, formerly the Communications Building theater, as part of "Summer Showbiz," the university's annual summer stock theater program.

The Broadway hit of 1947 will be updated about 50 years, but that won't involve any real changes in the script, Reynolds said.

"We're bringing Tommy and Jeff into the past from 1998 urban New York, rather than the 1940s," he said. "I believe the intent of the authors was to use a present day setting. It makes sense to view this play from a 1998 perspective rather than a 1947 perspective. It makes the stakes even higher for these two to stay or not to stay in Brigadoon."

The plot revolves around two Americans who are hunting in the highlands of Scotland when they come upon a village that's not listed on any map. The two learn that the ancient town and its inhabitants only appear for one day every 100 years to escape the clutches of some unfriendly witches.

During the course of the play's action, Tommy falls in love with Fiona MacLaren, one of the young women from the magical town. Tommy then must decide whether he wants to stay with Fiona, thus only existing for one day each century, or return to his fiancée in New York.

Mr. Lundie, the schoolmaster of Brigadoon, explains to the Americans how the town has been threatened by witches and how the townspeople prayed for a miracle. As a concept study, Reynolds is considering the significance of the witches, although they do not appear in the script. "My vision of the witches is that they were probably women who had a different religious background and that they were misunderstood."

The original Broadway musical was performed in 1947, just after World War II, a time of increased industrialism when changes occurred quickly and irrevocably. However, the sentiment of Brigadoon still holds an audience to this day.

"I'm looking at this play from the viewpoint that we can embrace the world or hide from it," Reynolds said. "We're going to explore these ideas; is this a miracle or a curse for Brigadoon's townspeople?"

As to whether he will be influenced by the 1986 SIUE version, in which he played the part of Tommy, Reynolds is fairly certain he can keep an objective eye on how to handle this current production. "I've been associated with this play actually for 15 years because I also was in a production of it in high school."

I'm sure there are some influences from both of those productions I may carry with me, but I'm approaching this now where I am in my life, which is totally different from then.

"I'm excited," he said. "We have some strong dancers and we'll be doing a good amount of the dance in the show. I'm really enjoying working with the choreography created by Paula Beals, who played Maggie in our 1986 production, and with Eric Barnett, who played Angus MacGuffie in that version."

Beals is an instructor in the SIUE Department of Theater and Dance, while Barnett, who is playing Archie Beaton in the upcoming production, is director of The University Museum at SIUE.

During 1997, there were several revivals of "Brigadoon" at regional theaters throughout the country to commemorate its 50th anniversary.

"It's a gem, a real Broadway warhorse, but I think it has more of a soul than many old Broadway hits," Reynolds said.

"Like Mr. Lundie tells Tommy: 'If you love someone deeply, anything is possible,' as he tries to answer Tommy's question about whether to stay. I believe if you do have love in your heart, you can't exclude others," he said.

"Love is what keeps us from excluding others and wrapping ourselves in a safe cocoon."

Tickets for "Brigadoon" are $10; $8 for senior citizens 65 and older, students and SIUE faculty and staff, with valid ID.

Tickets are available through the SIUE Fine Arts box office; call 650-2774.

'Smoke Signals' is a wise and funny film

Native Americans bring culture to screen

"Smoke Signals" arrives in theaters with the stars aligned, its New York premiere attended by Matt Damon, Winona Ryder and Christina Ricci, icons of Hip smiling upon the first major commercial release written and directed by Native Americans.

Thankfully, all blessings are deserved. "Smoke Signals" is wise and funny and a real breakthrough, worthy of any trends it hopes to set. Like Spike Lee's "She's Gotta Have It," which it in no other way resembles, this film introduces to the mainstream a world both strange and strangely familiar.

More celebrities could be found at the premiere than in the movie. The actors are little known and director Chris Eyre is making his feature debut. The "star" is the popular and gifted young writer Sherman Alexie, who reworks his story collection, "The Lone Ranger and Tonto Fistfight in Heaven," into a single, powerful myth.

Two young Indians, Victor Joseph and Thomas Builds-the-Fire, take a bus from the Coeur d'Alene reservation in Idaho to a trailer in Phoenix, Ariz. Their quest is to bring back the ashes of Victor's dead father, Arnold, a violent alcoholic who walked out 10 years earlier. They will learn that he had since quit drinking and moved in with the beautiful, good-natured Suzy Song. In his wallet, they will find a picture of his old family.

Like any good buddy-buddy movie, this one features friends as bantering opposites. Victor is tall and tough, Thomas short and scrawny. Victor is suspicious and moody, Thomas sweet and trusting. Victor's a stoic who'd rather not talk, Thomas a poet who won't shut up.

For Victor, the past means defeat. For Thomas, it means wisdom.

Stories and flashbacks take up much of the film. In fact, "Smoke Signals" is really a story about storytelling — as revelation, as commodity, as wish fulfillment. Alexie works from the oral tradition, where stories can (and must) change. In telling Suzy about an old father-son basketball game, it's as important for Arnold to say Victor made the winning shot as it is for Victor to say he missed it.

The humor is both sweet and sharp. The reservation radio station, KREZ, offers traffic updates ("A big truck just went by"), weather reports ("One of the clouds up there looks like a horse!") and daily inspiration ("It's a great day to be indigenous").

There's the Coeur d'Alene road sign that reads "Population: Variable" and the chant about John Wayne's teeth, improvised by Victor and Thomas after losing their bus seats to two surly white men.

"Smoke Signals" has a generous, unpretentious spirit, as if all pitched in for the greater good of the script. The directing and acting are plain, but effective, and the cinematography, by Brian Capener, is simple and open. This is one of those movies that reaches all the senses, from the taste of fry bread to the feel of wet grass.

Although he has points to make about white power and prejudice, Alexie has said the film is not political. Instead, "Smoke Signals" acts as its own best message, strong enough to make you see the world differently and entertaining enough to make you enjoy it.

What politician wouldn't settle for that? "Smoke Signals," a Miramax Films release, was produced by Larry Estes and Scott Rosenfeld.

Its running time is 89 minutes and its rating is PG-13, for violence and adult situations.

Heads to roll at Bastille Festival

Festival saluting France begins Friday in Souland Market Park

By Glen Sparks
Staff writer

First a parade, then a beheading. After that, the party begins.

The execution of France's King Louis XVI and his wife, Marie Antoinette, is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. — sharp — Friday, July 10, in Souland Market Park.

These bogus beheadings featuring local residents in period costumes kick off the 12th annual Bastille Days Festival.

The festival commemorates St. Louis' French heritage.

The famous seige of Paris' Bastille Prison on July 14, 1789, led to the royal couple's public execution.

Just before the beheadings, a parade will wind through Souland, a neighborhood with a long French heritage.

The parade will start at 6:30 p.m. at McGurk's Saloon, 12th Street and Russell Boulevard, and go east on Russell to Ninth Street and then to the "Beheading at the Park."

After the execution, the seventh annual Souland Bastille Wine Taste will follow. It will feature wines and champagnes from France and the United States. There also will be music and dancing, featuring The Leroy Pierson Band.

There is a $10 admission charge for the tasting that includes a table full of fruits and cheeses.

A flea market from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. will be a featured attraction Saturday, July 11. Booths at Souland Market Park will feature a variety of art, jewelry, clothing and more.

There also will be a free blues concert in the park highlighting some of St. Louis' top bands and musicians.

Debuting this year at the festival will be the Moulin Rouge Costume Ball from 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday in the park. Costumes should fit the era of the French Revolution.

The best King Louis, Marie Antoinette and executioner will get to portray those characters in the 1999 beheading celebration.

It costs $5 to get into the ball that will include entertainment from The Zydeco Crawdaddy's.

The Bastille Festival concludes Sunday, July 12, with a bicycle race through the streets of Souland starting at 10 a.m.

The U.S. Cycling Federation sanctions the race that is popular with cyclists across the Midwest.

The water-bartender obstacle course race in Souland Market Park will start at 1 p.m. Contestants will run through a jungle gym obstacle course for prizes and a trophy.

Throughout the festival, participating restaurants and taverns will feature food specials ranging from French to Cajun cuisine, live music and bar specials.

The Souland Business Association puts on the festival. Proceeds go to local charities in the Souland area.

HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, JULY 9

The sun and Mars together in Cancer continue to draw emotions to the forefront. The moon continues its journey through organizing Capricorn, helping keep everyone on schedule in spite of Cancer's moody influence. You may feel like there are not enough hours in the day to complete everything on your list — and you're probably right!

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 9). You can become financially stable by using your creative talents to increase your income. December could bring an opportunity to travel. An old love stabilizes in February, or you may meet someone new. Your lucky love signs are Sagittarius and Scorpio. A windfall is available to you if you set out on an entrepreneurial path. Your lucky numbers are 4, 22, 39 and 51.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The pursuit of romance is your main focus. You are most attracted to those who are first interested in you. Be open and affable. See the world through childlike eyes that still believe all things are possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). More is possible than you are presently exploring. Your lucky numbers are 6 and 14. Command authority regarding a new work challenge. Success doesn't preclude criticism — a thick skin is required.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Self-expression is the dominant necessity of human nature. Encourage your partners to support your ideas by making them their own. Vacation plans are in the works.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). There are forces at work that bring new career and relationship options to your attention. Focus on your long-term interests and aptitude for mastering new skills. You will not settle for less than you deserve.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). A relationship's intensity becomes sporadic. Seek common ground between musical and literary interests. A long-distance phone call has you feeling grounded and secure. Friday brings an element of peace and comfort.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's a day just like every other day! Fight the doldrums by investigating a family member's interests. Charitable time and money contributions are rewarding for you. Those in the sales or legal professions are especially active.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your verbal skills are heightened. Use shrewd but scrupulous tactics to get things done. Be careful not to reveal too much to a new friend who has not yet proven he or she is trustworthy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). A disciplined rival presents a challenge. Prepare and do your homework — your will-power is the secret weapon. Postpone the purchase of a big-ticket item. Your popularity increases when you share a little-known talent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Calmness prevails as you deal with a small rebellion. Your one-on-one skills pay off for you but not without a test. Romance is out there looking for you! Your best ideas come to you in the morning.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). A stodgy, overly proper approach is not working today. Loosen up, and visit another's perspective. Diversity and tolerance might serve you well. A sweetheart may use antics to get your attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You make tough decisions amidst chaos and confusion. Start with the small issues, and let the momentum build. Rid yourself of unneeded possessions, and simplify your life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Confronting your fear catapults you to a new level. Where your motivation comes from matters little now — you're in your element and on a bit of a roll. Someone short on cash could use your loan but is too proud to take it.

Instructor plans effort for artists

The "New Renaissance Experience" has rolled into town, and Belleville Area College art instructor Dale Threlkeld couldn't be happier.

Threlkeld, a nationally renowned painter who has a studio in the downtown St. Louis Loft District, hosted an exhibit known as the "New Renaissance Experience" recently.

The goal of the exhibit was to bring together the heart of St. Louis' artistic culture under one roof.

Threlkeld plans to open his studio for more such collaborative exhibits in the future, based on the good turnout.

speeches and fiction renowned for its wise maxims, biting social commentary and tall tales.

Koop, who served two terms as the nation's health advocate, forewarned the public about the dangers of smoking, environmental health hazards and the importance of diet, nutrition, immunization and disease prevention. During his tenure, Koop also became the government's chief spokesperson about AIDS. Since leaving office, he has continued to educate the public about health issues through writings, media appearances and university appearances.

Other speakers to appear during Arts and Issues 1998-99 season will be Myrtle Evers-Williams and John Updike.

Evers-Williams, former chair of the NAACP, is the widow of slain civil rights leader Medgar Evers. She is the author of "For Us, The Living," which depicts the civil rights struggle in Mississippi. Her work is also featured in the book and exhibit, "I Dream a World: Portrait of Black Women Who Changed America."

Evers-Williams continues her dedication to human rights, justice, and equality.

A Pulitzer Prize-winning author, Updike has 50 titles in print from children's books to adult fiction, creating worlds populated by witches, petty tyrants, adulterers and a collection of characters struggling with the American dream. He has waxed philosophic about golf and art, penned essays and poetry, and piled one magnum opus upon another and another. In addition to the Pulitzer, Updike has won the National Book Award, the American Book Award and the National Book Award Critics Circle Award.

Productions in the Arts and Issues series will include the James Sewell Ballet Company of New York City, Sept. 24; the St. Petersburg String Quartet, Oct. 21; and the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, Nov. 8.

Season tickets for the 1998-99 season are now available; individual tickets will go on sale Sept. 1. The cost of a season subscription for the seven-program series is $66; students, $33.

Admission includes free parking behind Dunham Hall. For season tickets information, call (618) 650-2626, or, from St. Louis toll-free, (888) 328-5168, Ext. 2626, or write: Arts and Issues, SIUE, Edwardsville, 62026-1083.

Dance, new exhibit planned at Mounds

Cahokia Mounds State Historic Site will feature an Indian Art Show, a new exhibit, dance performances and archaeological excavations during July.

The Contemporary Indian Art Show will be held Saturday and Sunday, July 11 and 12, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Interpretive Center.

Native Americans artists from across the country will display and sell many categories of art work, including watercolor, oil, gouache and acrylic paintings; pen and ink drawings; wood and stone sculpture; and silverwork jewelry. Judges will select winners for prize money provided by UMB Bank of St. Louis.

The art show, which is free and open to the public, is sponsored by the Cahokia Mounds Museum Society, Cahokia Mounds State Historic Site, and the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency, with additional support from DMB&B of St. Louis.

"The Mounds of Arkansas," a new exhibit prepared by Arkansas State Parks, opens in July and may be viewed through September. This photographic display features artifacts, excavations and maps from the Toltec Mounds, Parkin Mounds and the Hampson Museum.

Toltec Mounds, which were not built by the Toltecs as once believed in the 1800s, is a Late Woodland to early Mississippian site dating from about AD 700-900, including several mounds enclosed by a mile-long earthen embankment. Parkin Mound is a late Mississippian site that may be the village of Casqui visited by the DeSoto expedition in the mid 1500s.

The Hampson Museum features artifacts and excavations of the Nodena Mound and site, as well as other Mississippian sites in Arkansas.

The Kahok Dancers, a non-native group, will perform Sunday, July 19 at 2 and 3 p.m. in the Interpretive Center auditorium. The performances are free and open to the public.

Archaeological excavations will take place at several locations at the Cahokia site during July.

The University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, under the direction of Dr. Melvin Fowler, will examine rectangular, sand-filled pits partially exposed last summer near Mound 96 to see if they might be related to another wooden sun calendar.

Northwestern University will conduct a field school project, directed by Mary Beth Trubitt, to follow the course of the stockade wall around the southwestern portion of the Grand Plaza near the Twin Mounds. Visitors may view both of these projects when work is under way.

A crew from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, under the direction of William Woods, will try to determine the size, shape and function of a mass of stones encountered under the west side of Monks Mound.

The crew will use seismic sounding, resistivity tests and vertical coring to investigate this unusual feature, which was encountered during the ongoing project to install horizontal drains in the mound.

The Central Mississippi Valley Archaeological Research Center will reopen some Mound 34 excavations east of Monks Mound that were partially dug in the 1950s. Archaeologists will re-examine soil profiles to get a better understanding of the form, function and period of construction of this mound.

Because of the nature and location of these two projects, visitors will not be able to view work in progress.

Monks Mound is scheduled to reopen this month, pending the completion of several ongoing projects that depend on weather. Rainy weather and other complications during the past few months have delayed the reopening. Workers are replacing the steps up the front of the mound and installing drains in a portion of the mound to help alleviate severe slumping problems.

Free one-hour guided tours are offered at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 12:30 and 2:30 p.m. on Sundays. The early tours will visit Monks Mound once it is open and the stockade wall, with the later tours visiting the Grand Plaza.
